CASEY'S HEART by Amilee French

When Caroline "Casey" O'Hara's father suddenly dies, leaving her destitute with six younger brothers and sisters, she has no idea which way to turn.

Her siblings are taken by the county and she is put out of the tiny apartment they called home.

The only thing she has of worth is her body and her self-esteem, and she refused to sacrifice either of them just to survive.

When Casey happens upon a newspaper ad for a "mail order bride" placed by a farmer in Wyoming, she thinks that the Lord has shown her the light.

Rance McDonald is a rough and tumble farmer trying to keep his homestead going while raising two little girls on his own. He thinks that placing an ad for a bride is silly, but available women are few in Medicine Hat, Wyoming.

When Casey arrives the tension is immediate. Rance thinks she's too young and skinny to make it on the farm. She thinks he's a grumpy gus that wouldn't know a good woman if one hit him over the head with a frying pan.

Can Casey tear down the walls that surround Rance's heart and make a home for herself in the west; and hopefully someday reunite with her brothers and sisters?
