They make great decisions in the boardroom and lousy choices for the bedroom. They solve complex problems at work and can't solve the simple problem of finding the right man. They can successfully start a company but can't end a bad relationship. So what causes women who can manage a large staff at work, not to be able to manage one man at home? Today's societal influences and forces have created new behaviors, new opportunities, and new challenges for a woman to find, attract, and keep the right man. The 21st Century relationship model outlined in this book will show how principles and practices that are used to run a successful business can also be applied to finding the right man and maintain a healthy relationship. The Right Man Business Plan Model is built upon Four Cardinal Principles: • You only date when you are emotionally, spiritually, and mentally prepared to give friendship and receive friendship. • You only date men who are worthy to be in a relationship with you. • You only get into a relationship when both partners mutually agree to be exclusive, monogamous, and committed, and respect your needs and boundaries • You only will grow the relationship if there is equity, mutual benefits, and minimal costs. By identifying if you are operating as a relationship Sole Proprietor, Limited Liability Corporation, Partnership, or Corporation, you will determine what kind of partner you need. Understanding the proper procedures and protocols in each of the Four Stages of a relationship will better position you to find, attract, and keep the right life partner for you: • Stage 1- Attraction • Stage 2- Illumination • Stage 3- Evaluation • Stage 4- Maturation By completing the assessments and exercises in the book will help you find out what standards you stand for as a person, what values you stand on as a woman, and what qualities make you stand out as a partner.
