The Cat Hater's Handbook: How to Co-Exist With Your Significant Other's Significant Other Felicia Cane

This hilarious book is for anyone who has ever found themselves reluctantly co-habiting with someone else's cat. Written by a cat hater, for cat haters, this is not your Crazy Aunt Lilian's book of cats, but a tell-it-like-it-is survival guide. Included are sound strategies and coping mechanisms for making your life as odor and fur free as possible, while negotiating the minefield that is your cat lover's tender psyche.

From the introduction:

"You should never try to compete with the cat for the cat lover's affection. The cat-lover isn't seeking love—if she were, she would just get a dog or be a lot nicer to you. What the cat lover seeks is a cat-ological belief system, expressed through ritualized interactions with a non-responsive entity (flesh-cat) that by its very passivity and inscrutability is incapable of refuting any of its own supposed charms. This flesh-cat is the idol, standing in for a noumenal being (ur-cat), which isn't so much a pet as a species of Flying Spaghetti Monster, a mythic being so powerfully and imaginatively charged that I've never heard of a single instance of successful deprogramming."
